BIGELOW PLAN WILL HIT OHIO AGE PENSIONS

Federal Aid Would Be Taken Away, Committee Points Out

"NEED" PRINCIPLE OF NATIONAL LAW

Sponsor of Ohio Pension Plan Takes Issue with Committee

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Sept. 30.—Adoption of the Bigelow old age pension amendment to the constitution at the Nov. 7 election, the Ohio Emergency committee contended today, would deprive Ohio of federal aid for subsidies to the aged.

Based on "Need"
"This is due," said the committee in its handbook for speakers opposing the Bigelow amendment, "to a provision in the federal social security law requiring that every state pay pensions on the basis of need, a principle not contained in the Bigelow proposal."

The federal government contributes about $16,000,000 annually for the present Ohio pension system. Herbert S. Bigelow, former congressman and minister, immediately took issue with the committee's views.

"It is up to the state to define what need is," argued Bigelow. "We are setting up in the constitutional amendment a new definition of need which in effect is: If any person in retirement lacks so much as $50 a month, he's in need; if less than $50, then the difference is the measure of that need."

The Bigelow amendment would guarantee incomes of $50 monthly to single persons and $80 for married couples who are not gainfully employed and have passed their 60th birthday.

Hits "Ambiguities"
The committee also said in its handbook that "ambiguities" in the language "might lead to a great deal of unfairness," attacking the amendment provision for payments to persons "who are retired from gainful occupation as wage earners."

"Farmers, small store owners and professional people have not been wage earners," the committee concluded. "Would the courts exclude them from benefits? Who knows? The language seems to exclude them."

Periodic Recommendation Of New Building Is Made

LISBON, Sept. 30.—The century-old county jail was again condemned by the September grand jurors who visited the prison prior to making their report to the court Friday. The building has been condemned by State Fire Marshal Ray R. Gill, who has ordered it vacated.

The grand jury's statement concerning the jail was as follows: "We recommend a new building for the reason that the ventilation and sanitary conditions of the whole jail at the present time make it uninhabitable; that the shed adjoining the jail and the jail itself are fire hazards, and the jail is inadequate to house the number of prisoners that are sent here by our various courts."

Maintenance of Neutrality Remains Major Question

(By Associated Press)
ROME, Sept. 30.—The Italian cabinet, meeting with Premier Mussolini today, voted new taxes to meet Italy's unbalanced budget and "new military expenses caused by the international situation."

A levy of one-half of one per cent on private property was approved together with a two per cent tax on general business turnover.

"The property tax is to be levied on all real estate, goods and securities of all types except bank deposits and personal clothing, owned by all persons, companies, corporations and societies over the amount of 10,000 lire (about $500)."

Churches and scientific and artistic collections are exempt. Italy stood by Germany and Soviet Russia as a "friendly power" ready to cooperate in a quick settlement to bring an end to the European war.

Widespread Conflict Feared

At the same time, there was not much hope in official circles that Britain or France would heed a call for peace under terms set by Berlin and Moscow. Diplomats feared, however, a refusal in the face of the new German-Soviet accords might plunge all southeastern Europe into the conflict.

This might force Italy to take one side or another. If she is forced to fight, a number of Fascists say, she will come to the side of Adolf Hitler.

Whether Premier Mussolini would be able to maintain Italy's delicate neutrality remained a major question.

Fascist circles say Mussolini alone will make the ultimate decision, with Italy's own interests in mind, and they indicate it will take more than Hitler's request for Italy to join him. At the same time, they say Italy's non-participation is a part of the policy of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Collide Near Columbiana; One Destroyed By Flames

Damage in the amount of $3,000 resulted from an accident involving two trucks on Route 46 one mile north of Columbiana, at 6:45 p. m. Friday, the state patrol reported.

A truck driven by Ralph Miller of Chicago, skidded when the driver attempted to avoid hitting two pedestrians, and struck a steel truck coming in the opposite direction, driven by Roy Hitchcock, of Blue Island, Ill.

The gasoline tank on the steel truck caught fire and the truck was destroyed. Miller's vehicle also caught fire and he drove one mile into Columbiana where the village fire department extinguished the flames. The driver dumped his cargo of miscellaneous freight on the street. Deputy sheriffs said some of it was stolen.

Firemen were unable to save the other truck. Neither driver was injured.

No one was hurt when automobiles driven by Charles Conley, 42, of North Benlin, and Ronald Farrell, 26, of Cleveland tangled at the highway intersection at Westville at 1:30 a. m. today.

Plans To Meet Big Scale War Are Intensified

Western Front Still Quiet As Diplomats Hold War Spotlight

(By Associated Press)

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The French government, apparently turning a cold shoulder to German-Soviet Russian peace gestures, intensified preparations today to meet any threat of a big scale Nazi offensive to back up the peace offer.

The French general staff reported the night was "without incident," but said patrols were active throughout the region east of the Saar river on the northern half of the western front. Apparently the zone referred to is south of Saarbrücken.

Premier Daladier and military officials held a "strategic conference" this morning to review the French advance between the Maginot and Siegfried lines.

Among those attending were Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander-in-chief of French-British forces; Admiral Jean Darlan, commander-in-chief of the French navy; Gen. Alphonse Georges, representing the air force, and Gen. Jules Decap, head of the premier's "military cabinet."

Immediately after the meeting of defense leaders, Daladier conferred for 45 minutes with President Albert Lebrun at Elysee palace.

Planes In Combat
Informed quarters reported aerial forces of both sides continued frequent flights, with the Germans losing two planes and the French one in scattered combats yesterday.

While French troops sought to strengthen positions gained in a month of fighting, both government and press indicated France never would accept a basis for peace the German-Soviet pact partitioning Poland.

In a radio address last night, Jean Girardoux, commissioner of information, accused Germany and Russia of "blackmail" and declared they were trying to force an "eastern peace" upon Europe.

"Perhaps Hitler will propose to us," Girardoux said, "on condition that we deny not only our treaties but our tastes, our convictions, our religions and our liberties."

"He will give us what he calls peace—that is a short delay which permits Germany to digest its prey and to forge arms to share its next prey."

Soviet Russia's emergency as Germany's partner in redrawing the map of eastern Europe precipitated intense diplomatic activity today while quiet on the western front persisted.

Turkey, caught between ties with Russia and the British-French allies, was reported.

It is reported that Britain and France her mutual assistance obligations to them would be annulled if they went to war with Russia.

2. To have agreed with Russian leaders that she would close the Balcans to warships of all belligerent nations, thus neutralizing the Black sea.

Other developments reflected uneasiness in southeastern Europe. Rumania's foreign minister prepared to go to Moscow Monday with a staff of experts; a German economic mission arrived in Budapest; Bulgaria was expecting Rumanian territorial concessions; British officers conferred with King George II of Greece.

The German reichstag, called only to hear a declaration by reichsfuehrer Hitler, will meet "in the coming week," it was announced in Berlin.

The boy, knocked to the ground, suffered a fractured skull and was taken to the Central Clinic.

The woman, whose name, police failed to get, apparently was unhurt.

Condition of the boy at the hospital today was reported as fair.

Planes In Combat Informed quarters reported aerial forces of both sides continued frequent flights, with the Germans losing two planes and the French one in scattered combats yesterday.

While French troops sought to strengthen positions, gained in a month of fighting, both government and press indicated France never would accept a basis for peace the German-Soviet pact partitioning Poland.

In a radio address last night, Jean Girardoux, commissioner of information, accused Germany and Russia of "blackmail" and declared they were trying to force an "eastern peace" upon Europe.

"Perhaps Hitler will propose to us," Girardoux said, "on condition that we deny not only our treaties but our tastes, our convictions, our religions and our liberties."

"He will give us what he calls peace—that is a short delay which permits Germany to digest its prey and to forge arms to snare its next prey."

Soviet Russia's emergency as Germany's partner in redrawing the map of eastern Europe precipitated intense diplomatic activity today while quiet on the western front persisted.

Turkey, caught between ties with Russia and the British-French allies, was reported:

1. To have notified Britain and France her mutual assistance obligations to them would be annulled if they went to war with Russia.

2. To have agreed with Russian leaders that she would close the Dardanelles to warships of all belligerent nations, thus neutralizing the Black sea.

Other developments reflected uneasiness in southeastern Europe. Rumania's foreign minister prepared to go to Moscow Monday with a staff of experts; a German economic mission arrived in Budapest; Bulgaria was expecting Rumanian territorial concessions; British officers conferred with King George II of Greece.

The German reichstag, called only to hear a declaration by reichsfuehrer Hitler, will meet "in the coming week," it was announced in Berlin.

Bicycle Rider's Skull Is Fractured Russell Graber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl R. Graber of 969 Franklin ave., was the victim of an odd accident Friday.

Riding his bicycle, young Graber collided with a woman walking near the corner of N. Lincoln ave. and Second st. at 5:30 p. m.

The boy, knocked to the ground, suffered a fractured skull and was taken to the Central Clinic.

The woman, whose name police failed to get, apparently was unhurt.

Condition of the boy at the hospital today was reported as fair.

STITCH IN TIME

Organization of a high-powered, statewide organization to fight the screwball Bigelow proposals is a stitch in time. Ohioans are grateful.

The organization's purpose is to make clear the effects of adopting the two amendments proposed by Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow—one calling for pensions, the other for reduction of the number of signatures to initiate amendments and laws.

Organized opposition to these schemes is an indispensable service. It is sad but true that many voters will approve a pension plan wholly from motives of selfishness, without caring what it would do to others. The Bigelow plan, if adopted, would leave Ohio with the worst headache in its history.

It would be enormously costly; its backers don't know exactly how costly, but even they admit it would cost a lot. The tax scheme they propose to defray the expense would wreck property values and saddle a heavy income tax on Ohioans. Ohioans would not tolerate such a setup.

These things are as clear as day to all who look at the proposal analytically. The organization to oppose the Bigelow proposals will attempt to make an overwhelming majority of Ohioans look at them that way. It will be known as the Ohio Emergency committee.

While the pension plan will get special attention from the committee's statisticians and speakers, the proposal to make initiation of laws easier won't be ignored. It is easy enough now to get half-baked proposals on the ballot—too easy. No worthwhile proposal ever gets sidetracked for lack of support under existing requirements.

Ohioans owe their close attention to the campaign against the Bigelow proposals. There is no case to be made for them other than one depending on loose thinking and the desire to get something for nothing. That case must be knocked down between now and election day. It can be knocked down by sober judgment.

NO FREEDOM OF THE SEAS

Without benefit of ballyhoo—so far—freedom of the seas has been abandoned as a cardinal point of American foreign policy. This important shift, concealed in discussion of the cash and carry proposal, will be given due attention in congressional debate, no doubt.

The fact it has escaped wide notice up to this time seems due to experience gained during the World war and already being repeated in this war. In the struggle to control shipping during wartime it is shipping itself that is contraband, not the goods being carried.

Thus, a Swedish merchantman carrying wood pulp to Britain is regarded by Germany as a proper victim of submarine warfare, not on the excuse that its cargo has war use but actually because Germany is trying to make its blockade of Britain as damaging as the British blockade of Germany.

The five great neutral countries in the World war—Norway, Sweden, Denmark, the Netherlands and Spain—together lost more shipping tonnage than France and Italy combined, according to British admiralty estimates. Norway alone lost 29 ships, due chiefly to its insistence that German submarines should not operate in Norwegian waters.

Ships were sunk no matter what they carried. Coal was carried more often in torpedoed ships than any other single commodity, but Germany and Great Britain sank ships carrying timber, flax, lard, wheat, petroleum, resin, cottonseed cake and many other supplies only distantly related to purely military commodities. Many neutrals, hoping to find safety, restricted exportation of actual munitions, but without effect.

Their experience and the experience of the United States is the background of the cash and carry scheme, which is simply recognition of the fact that freedom of the seas does not and cannot exist in wartime. By refusing to insist on having something that can't be granted, the United States shows it has learned a vital lesson from the World war.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

It's fall. A New York commentator found 40 signs of the season in the metropolises the other day. It doesn't take that many to clinch the case, however.

Color is the best evidence. The grass is turning brown. The leaves are turning yellow, and so are the occasional straw hats worn too long by rugged individuals.

Tanned faces are beginning to look a bit yellow too. The air on chilly days turns gray with coal smoke. Toes, fingers and the tips of noses and ears have a way of turning blue early in the morning and late at night. White shoes that have earned a vacation long ago quit being white. And the rosy outlook favored by a large number of citizens as recently as the first of September has become unapologetically gloomy as this month ran its tumultuous course, from peace to war, from summer to fall.

REPORT TO GERMANY

With so many persons saying what they don't mean and meaning what they don't say, the popular debate on foreign policy can't be called a demonstration of clear thinking.

Nevertheless, a few things are too clear to be muddled. Agents watching developments here for the Nazi dictatorship can send home one report without fear of contradiction.

The American people may talk in circles about the best way to keep from sending U. S. troops abroad, which is what they don't want to do, but there is no question about their sympathy for the Allies.

They are dead set against Adolf Hitler and everything he stands for. The only question in their mind is how far they dare to go without plunging this country into war. If they become convinced that the arms embargo can be lifted safely, to help the Allies, they will do it. There is no such thing as neutrality of spirit in the United States in 1939.

What this means to Germany is the presence of an unfriendly public opinion on this side of the Atlantic which will favor the Allied cause in a pinch. Unlike the situation at the outset of the World war in 1914, there is no question about the American attitude.

It is hostile to Hitlerism. Germany can have no illusions about where America stands. It can have no illusions, either, about what would happen in a crisis that threatened to make Hitlerism triumphant in Europe. The United States does not want to fight, but if it ever is forced to fight it won't be on Hitler's side.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, October 1

SUNDAY'S horoscope must be read as a particularly lively and stirring one, with rather vital issues at stake in both the business and private relations. It is probable that the latter may be under high stimuli, but social, domestic, romantic or cultural affairs are threatened by deception and peculiar dangers. Young and romantic persons should be especially vigilant and circumspect.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year in which all intellectual and cultural expressions may be under particularly high tension. This tension may precipitate lively if not drastic performance. Young people and youthful urges and demands are under clamorous need for "emancipation." Imprudent or reckless pursuit of such objectives may entail sinister involvements or regrettable complications. Use restraint, discretion and forethought before seeking illicit "escapes."

A child born on this day, while being versatile, artistic, musical or literary, may be carried to extremes by youthful urges and impetuousities. Proper training of excellent talents, and the direction of a refined, genial and lovable nature, would fit it for a very successful career.

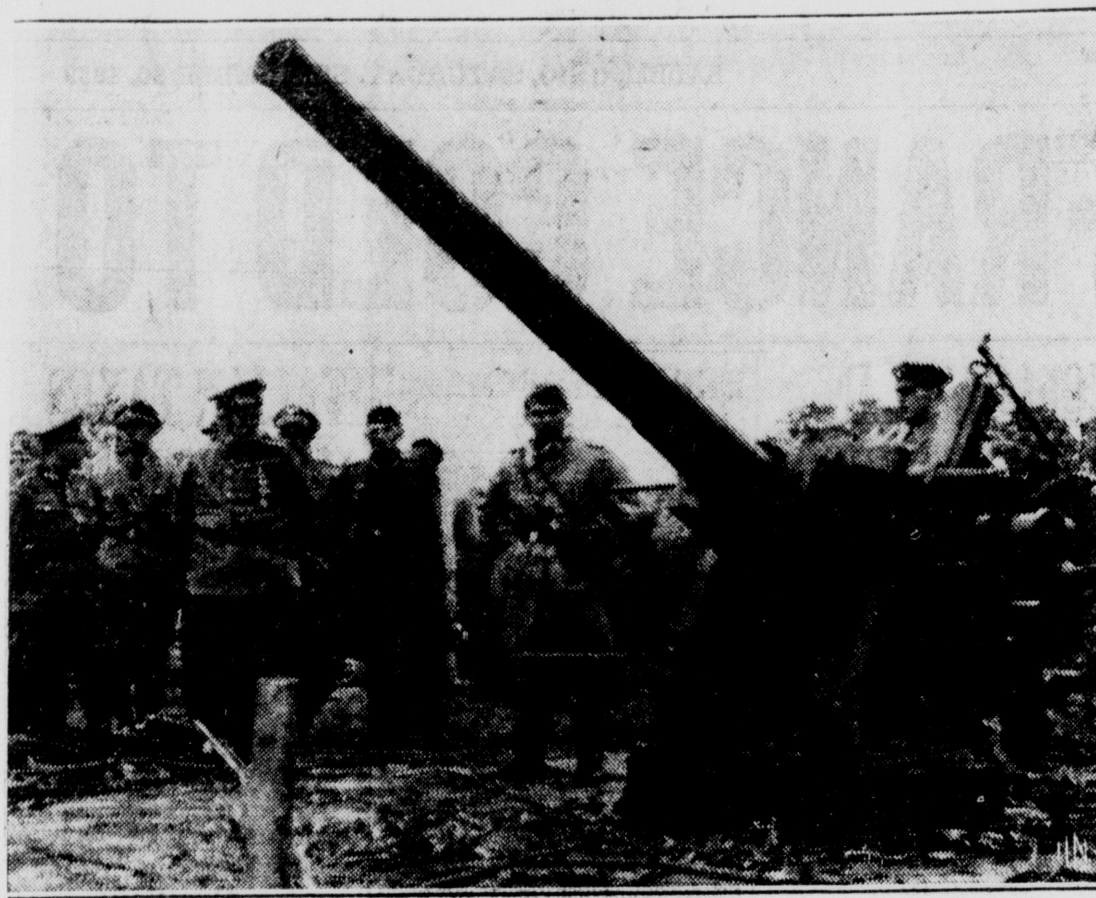

For Monday, October 2

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for sudden and quiet unforeseen developments which may cause rather revolutionary changes in old and wearying inhibitions or depressions. Limitations, difficulties and delays may give way to new urges, emotions and ambition in romance and courtship, or in emotional or artistic adventures.

Those whose birthday it is are under an astral urge to find success, happiness and adventure in artistic, social or domestic affairs. There may be a radical breaking away from old persons, places and circumstances, to find lively events, good fortune and happiness. There may be secrecy or hidden joys to heighten spiritual satisfactions.

A child born on this day may have a rather curious or intriguing character and temperament, with hidden sources of inspiration, ideals or psychological gratifications. Openly radical and venturesome, it may be romantic and pleasure-seeking.

LABOR LEADER NEVER STRUCK

M. J. Lyden, Ohio Union Chieftain, Proud of Long Record

YOUNGSTOWN, Sept. 30.—When Michael J. Lyden, president of the Ohio Federation of Labor, lists his accomplishments in 33 years of union activity, he likes to point out that he never has gone on strike in that period.

This genial Irishman has kept up with the times, learning to drive a bus when they replaced "trot cars." He started work on Labor day, 1906, as a conductor on a two-man interurban car running between Warren, O., and New Castle, Pa. Now he drives a bus which requires him to start work at 4 a. m.

Sticks to agreements. The importance of "sticking to an agreement" is the No. 1 point in his labor creed and is stressed in his dealings with the 300,000 Ohio federation men whom he leads.

Lyden, now 57, credits the labor movement with improving working conditions of union members and all workers.

"Labor organizations have been instrumental in sponsoring most of the progressive social legislation on our statute books, and keeping off the detrimental legislation," he says.

Claiming that unions have made possible high standards of living in the United States, Lyden credits them with benefiting employers also by increasing the number of efficient and satisfied workers.

"Youths imbued with the democracy and liberty of unionism will keep democracy in America," Lyden said recently in stressing his interest in teaching to young union members their responsibilities.

Comes to U. S. at 17. Lyden came to the United States from County Mayo, Ireland, at the age of 17. He worked in Philadelphia three years, then came here to enter a steel mill.

As a representative of the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America he was elected third vice president of the Ohio Federation of Labor in 1924. He became president in 1935 to fill an unexpired term and was elected president in 1936. He was re-elected last August.

Slight, ruddy faced and gray haired, he spends his evenings mostly in keeping up with his union correspondence, studying economics and attending meetings. He takes an active part in Mahoning county Democratic politics and an improvement club and heads the United Irish Societies of the Mahoning valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyden have two sons and three daughters.

Cathartic Habit Invites Colitis, Clendening Warns

By IOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

COLITIS is a term that is employed more by the layman than the physician. To the latter it means something quite specific, an inflammation of the large bowel. To the layman it means any vague feeling of discomfort below the navel and above the knee.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

layman calls "colitis" usually is basically constipation and a nervous constitution, working on a mind that is not calculated to deal with either.

Cathartic colitis is as near as the physician can get to putting an exact name on the layman's colitis. In measuring into a series of cases of "colitis" as termed by patients, a clinic found the following conditions:

- (1) Use of phenolphthalein as a cathartic for six months or more—156
- (2) Use of other cathartic drugs—40
- (3) Small intestinal parasites which probably had nothing to do with the situation—73
- (4) Lack of stomach secretion—95
- (5) Business or family worries—80
- (6) Emotional instability—480.

Treatment Not Easy

Treatment, naturally, is something that is easier to describe than to carry out. How one is going to get rid of business, emotional worries or emotional instability is something I wouldn't know.

The cathartic and enema habit, however, can be reasoned out of a person. The use of a cathartic is a perfectly natural idea when discomfort in the abdomen is present. The "colitis" patient feels as if there were something in the bowel that will move on if a cathartic is taken. But the "something" is only an irritation on the inside of the bowel caused by previous cathartics. Another cathartic only makes it worse.

The enema habit results in the same thing. I have seen the inside of the lower bowel of an enema addict actually covered with small spots of ulceration. It was a colitis all right, but the colitis was caused by the enemata and the only treatment is to stop them.

Mucous Colitis

Mucous colitis, belongs to the same clan, and has long been considered a very intractable malady. The patient passes long strings of mucous, accompanied by spasm. There is always a nervous background for the condition, and as it seems very serious to the patient, the nervous condition is kept up and a vicious circle established. Vicious circles, indeed, are characteristic of all forms of colitis and constipation.

Treatment consists of the correction of bad habits, such as the use of water enemata, laxative and purgative drugs. The diet must be smooth, free from roughage. It should, however, be ample and contain nourishing foods, such as tomato juice, fruit juices, in general. A great deal of success has come from the use of apple and Patients should be made to understand the true nature of the condition—that it is a functional, not an organic or dangerous disease.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. M.: "My husband contracts malaria while in the army every year he seems to have a cure of it. Please tell me the best way to treat or prevent it."

Answer: "The experience is common among malaria patients. The cause is failure to keep up treatment with quinine long enough. After the "curative" course, additional quinine should be given by mouth for several months."

C. A. M.: "Will you please tell in your column what causes the popping of my knees?"

Answer: "The knee joints, like any other joint may pop or crack due to loose or dry ligaments. The knees especially cartilages may become loose and cause the same symptoms. If not associated with pain, it is probably of no consequence. In elderly people it is normal."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th St., New York City. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, October 1

SUNDAY'S horoscope must be read as a particularly lively and stirring one, with rather vital issues at stake in both the business and private relations. It is probable that the latter may be under high stimuli, but social, domestic, romantic or cultural affairs are threatened by deception and peculiar dangers. Young and romantic persons should be especially vigilant and circumspect.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year in which all intellectual and cultural expressions may be under particularly high tension. This tension may precipitate lively if not drastic performance. Young people and youthful urges and demands are under clamorous need for "emancipation." Imprudent or reckless pursuit of such objectives may entail sinister involvements or regrettable complications. Use restraint, discretion and forethought before seeking illicit "escapes."

A child born on this day, while being versatile, artistic, musical or literary, may be carried to extremes by youthful urges and impetuousities. Proper training of excellent talents, and the direction of a refined, genial and lovable nature, would fit it for a very successful career.

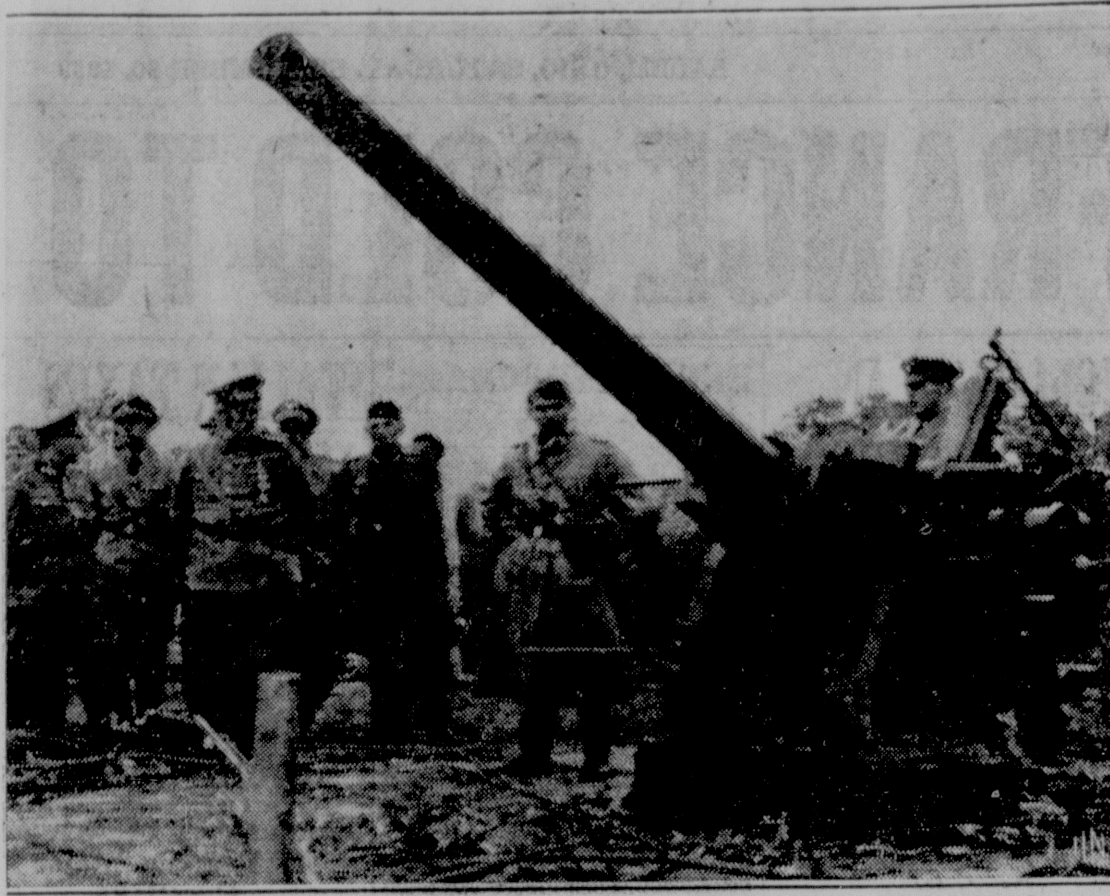

For Monday, October 2

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for sudden and quiet unforeseen developments which may cause rather revolutionary changes in old and wearying inhibitions or depressions. Limitations, difficulties and delays may give way to new urges, emotions and ambition in romance and courtship, or in emotional or artistic adventures.

Those whose birthday it is are under an astral urge to find success, happiness and adventure in artistic, social or domestic affairs. There may be a radical breaking away from old persons, places and circumstances, to find lively events, good fortune and happiness. There may be secrecy or hidden joys to lighten spiritual satisfactions.

A child born on this day may have a rather curious or intriguing character and temperament, with hidden sources of inspiration, ideals or psychological gratifications. Openly radical and venturesome, it may be romantic and pleasure-seeking.

LABOR LEADER
NEVER STRUCKM. J. Lyden, Ohio Union
Chieftain, Proud of Long Record

YOUNGSTOWN, Sept. 30.—When Michael J. Lyden, president of the Ohio Federation of Labor, lists his accomplishments in 33 years of union activity, he likes to point out that he never has gone on strike in that period.

This genial Irishman has kept up with the times, learning to drive a bus when they replaced street cars. He started work on Labor day, 1903, as a conductor on a two-man interurban car running between Warren, O., and New Castle, Pa. Now he drives a bus which requires him to start work at 4 a. m.

Sticks to Agreements. The importance of "sticking to an agreement" is the No. 1 point in his labor creed and is stressed in his dealings with the 300,000 Ohio federation men whom he leads.

Lyden, now 57, credits the labor movement with improving working conditions of union members and all workers.

"Labor organizations have been instrumental in sponsoring most of the progressive social legislation on our statute books, and keeping off the detrimental legislation," he says.

Claiming that unions have made possible high standards of living in the United States, Lyden credits them with benefiting employers also by increasing the number of efficient and satisfied workers.

"Youths imbued with the democracy and liberty of unionism will keep democracy in America," Lyden said recently in stressing his interest in teaching to young union members their responsibilities.

Comes to U. S. at 17. Lyden came to the United States from County Mayo, Ireland, at the age of 17. He worked in Philadelphia three years, then came here to enter a steel mill.

As a representative of the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America he was elected third vice president of the Ohio Federation of Labor in 1924. He became president in 1935 to fill an unexpired term and was elected president in 1936. He was re-elected last August.

Slight, ruddy faced and gray haired, he spends his evenings mostly in keeping up with his union correspondence, studying economics and attending meetings. He takes an active part in Mahoning county Democratic politics and an improvement club and heads the United Irish Societies of the Mahoning valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyden have two sons and three daughters.

Cathartic Habit Invites Colitis, Clendening Warns

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
COLITIS is a term that is employed more by the layman than the physician. To the latter it means something quite specific, an inflammation of the large bowel. To the layman it means any vague feeling of discomfort below the Mason and Dixon line. What the layman calls "colitis" usually is, basically, constipation and a nervous constitution, working on a mind that is not calculated to deal with either.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Catarrhal colitis is as near as the physician can get to putting an exact name on the layman's colitis. In incurring into a series of cases of "colitis" as termed by patients, a clinic found the following conditions:

- (1) Use of phenolphthalein as a cathartic for six months or more—156.
- (2) Use of other cathartic drugs—40.
- (3) Small intestinal parasites which probably had nothing to do with the situation—73.
- (4) Lack of stomach secretion—95.
- (5) Business or family worries—80.
- (6) Emotional instability—480.

Treatment Not Easy

Treatment, naturally, is something that is easier to describe than to carry out. How one is going to get rid of business, emotional worries or emotional instability is something I wouldn't know.

The cathartic and enema habit, however, can be reasoned out of a person. The use of a cathartic is a perfectly natural idea when discomfort in the abdomen is present. The "colitis" patient feels as if there were something in the bowel that will move on if a cathartic is taken. But the "something" is only an irritation on the inside of the bowel caused by previous cathartics. Another cathartic only makes it worse.

The enema habit results in the same thing. I have seen the inside of the lower bowel of an enema addict actually covered with small spots of ulceration. It was a colitis all right, but the colitis was caused by the enemas and the only treatment is to stop them.

Mucous Colitis

Mucous colitis belongs to the same clan, and has long been considered a very intractable malady. The patient passes long strings of mucous, accompanied by spasm. There is always a nervous background for the condition, and as it seems very serious to the patient, the nervous condition is kept up and a vicious circle established. Vicious circles, indeed, are characteristic of all forms of colitis and constipation.

Treatment consists of the correction of bad habits, such as the use of water enemas, laxative and purgative drugs. The diet must be smooth, free from roughage. It should, however, be ample and contain nourishing foods, such as tomato juice, fruit juices in general. Lately a great deal of success has come from the use of apple juice. Patients should be made to understand the true nature of the condition—that it is a functional, not an organic or dangerous disease.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. M.: "My husband contracted malaria while in the army and every year he seems to have a recurrence of it. Please tell me the best way to treat or prevent it."

Answer—The experience is quite regular among malaria patients. The cause is failure to keep up treatment with quinine long enough. After the "curative" course, additional quinine should be given by mouth for several months.

C. A. M.: "Will you please tell in your column what causes the popping of my knees?"

Answer—The knee joints, like any other joint may pop or crack due to loose or dry ligaments. In the knees, especially, cartilages may become loose and cause the same symptoms. If not associated with pain, it is probably of no consequence. In elderly people it is normal.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven

phlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th St., New York City. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

The Festival of Harvest

"The people of God in the Old Testament had three great festivals: Passover, Pentecost and the Feast of Tabernacles. All this shows us how much importance God attached to our recognition of His gifts and our thanksgiving for them. The New Testament also refers to God's rich temporal blessing.

"Our harvests always are plentiful. If the harvest of wheat or meager, the supply of corn is doubly abundant. We do not know what famine means. Year after year our granaries are filled to overflowing, and there is food enough for all and to spare. How grateful we ought to be."

"We thank Thee then, O Father, For all things bright and good. The seed-time and the harvest, Our life, our health, and food; No gifts have we to offer For all Thy love imparts, But that which Thou desirest, Our humble, thankful hearts."

Complete services for the church and announcements follow:

Sunday school, 9:45. (Matthew 2:13-23) Charles W. Youtz, Supt.

"The world into which Jesus came was marked by the dominance and rule of the Roman Empire. The culture of Greece was dominant everywhere. Social conditions were in need of severe change and betterment. This religious life of many people had become empty and very formalistic. The deep religious people were looking for a Messiah who would be sent of God to be the deliverer of mankind from the turmoil and confusion of life. Jesus came and time has proven that His gospel has changed the world. Perfection has not been reached. The fault lies not in the weakness of Christ and His teaching but in the shortcomings of His disciples in His Kingdom."

Morning worship, 11 — Sermon "Onward Christian Soldiers."

"The Christian church is not militaristic. Anyone who has studied the teachings of Christ must be a lover of peace and a worker for the brotherhood of man. There are some terms from the military world that ought to apply to the life and work of Christians in the Kingdom of God. A hymn written for the use of Christians in procession to the services of God serves as a fine motto. The army of God's followers must ever be willing to move forward to take the world for God. The progress of this Kingdom on earth must rely upon Christian believers. Soldiers of the cross must not shrink from sacrifice and deprivation as they serve Christ."

Services In Our Churches

Baptist Members Open Program of Fall Activities

Services Sunday will launch the first Baptist church on its program of fall activities, centering around the general theme "A Revival of Vital Religion".

The Festival of Harvest

"The people of God in the Old Testament had three great festivals: Passover, Pentecost and the Feast of Tabernacles. While each of these three festivals had its own specific purpose, yet in time thanksgiving for harvest was connected with every one of them. All this shows us how much importance God attached to our recognition of His gifts and our thanksgiving for them. The New Testament also refers to God's rich temporal blessing.

"Our harvests always are plentiful. If the harvest of wheat is abundant. We do not know what famine means. Year after year our granaries are filled to overflowing, and there is food enough for all and to spare. How grateful we ought to be."

We thank Thee then, O Father, For all things bright and good, For seed-time and the harvest, Our life, our health, and food; No gifts have we to offer For all Thy love imparts, But that which Thou desirest, Our humble, thankful hearts."

Sunday school, 9:45. (Matthew 2:13-23) Charles W. Youtz, Supt.

"The world into which Jesus came was marked by the dominance and rule of the Roman Empire. The culture of Greece was dominant everywhere. Social conditions were in need of some change and betterment. This religious life of many people had become empty and very formalistic. The deep religious people were looking for a Messiah who would be sent of God to be the deliverer of mankind from the turmoil and confusion of life. Jesus came and time has proven that His gospel has changed the world. Perfection has not been reached. The fault lies not in the weakness of Christ and His teaching but in the shortcomings of His disciples in His Kingdom."

Morning worship, 11 — Sermon "Onward Christian Soldiers."

"The Christian church is not militaristic. Anyone who has studied the teachings of Christ must be a lover of peace and a worker for the brotherhood of man. There are some terms from the military world that ought to apply to the life and work of Christians in the Kingdom of God. A hymn written for the use of Christians in procession to the services of God serves as a fine motto. The army of God's followers must ever be willing to move forward to take the world for God. The progress of this Kingdom on earth must rely upon Christian believers. Soldiers of the cross must not shrink from sacrifice and deprivation as they serve Christ."

The Festival of Harvest

"The people of God in the Old Testament had three great festivals: Passover, Pentecost and the Feast of Tabernacles. While each of these three festivals had its own specific purpose, yet in time thanksgiving for harvest was connected with every one of them. All this shows us how much importance God attached to our recognition of His gifts and our thanksgiving for them. The New Testament also refers to God's rich temporal blessing.

"Our harvests always are plentiful. If the harvest of wheat is abundant. We do not know what famine means. Year after year our granaries are filled to overflowing, and there is food enough for all and to spare. How grateful we ought to be."

We thank Thee then, O Father, For all things bright and good, For seed-time and the harvest, Our life, our health, and food; No gifts have we to offer For all Thy love imparts, But that which Thou desirest, Our humble, thankful hearts."

Sunday school, 9:45. (Matthew 2:13-23) Charles W. Youtz, Supt.

"The world into which Jesus came was marked by the dominance and rule of the Roman Empire. The culture of Greece was dominant everywhere. Social conditions were in need of some change and betterment. This religious life of many people had become empty and very formalistic. The deep religious people were looking for a Messiah who would be sent of God to be the deliverer of mankind from the turmoil and confusion of life. Jesus came and time has proven that His gospel has changed the world. Perfection has not been reached. The fault lies not in the weakness of Christ and His teaching but in the shortcomings of His disciples in His Kingdom."

Morning worship, 11 — Sermon "Onward Christian Soldiers."

"The Christian church is not militaristic. Anyone who has studied the teachings of Christ must be a lover of peace and a worker for the brotherhood of man. There are some terms from the military world that ought to apply to the life and work of Christians in the Kingdom of God. A hymn written for the use of Christians in procession to the services of God serves as a fine motto. The army of God's followers must ever be willing to move forward to take the world for God. The progress of this Kingdom on earth must rely upon Christian believers. Soldiers of the cross must not shrink

Turn about Frock

By PRUNELLA WOOD

TODAY'S DRESS is one of those likely to be remembered as a favorite when your small daughter grows up and thinks back to her school days. It's simple and sturdy but it's also fun to wear. Both blouse bodice and skirt are reversible, plain on one side and checked on the other. Studs instead of buttons fasten the jacket, so that it may be turned in a jiffy. The skirt is the kind all little girls adore, full and frisky looking.

The frock may be worn four different ways, as sketched, and comes in rayon taffeta for party wear as well as in percale for every day. Colors are Copenhagen and white, wine and white and black and wine. The price will confirm many a mother's opinion that it scarcely pays to spend hours over her own sewing machine.

"REDHEADS ARE LUCKY"

BY VERA BROWN

SYNOPSIS

Mike Shannon, pretty mahogany-haired magazine counter girl at the Hotel Eureka, is trying to reform one of its spectacular guests—the much publicized Handsome Larry Regan, sensational young southpaw pitcher whose misconduct has been worrying his team's management. Mike is the chief support of her family. She is not so pleased when "Wish" Malone, the club's No. 1 scout, suggests that she might marry the erratic Handsome. But when the big boy falls again for liquor, she rushes to his room to "bring him to." Assistant Coach Harper arrives, a most embarrassing scene ensued. Later that day at the stadium, when "kidded" content, Assistant Coach Harper, but he escaped suspension with a warning. The next day, Mike was amazed to receive a note from Regan, reading: "You've got to marry me."

CHAPTER VIII

In the midst of her confusion Handsome burst out of the elevator, strode into the lobby. It was like a first act entrance. He exuded well being, complete content. Pressed, shaved, not a hair out of place. And he had on a new suit, Mike was sure.

In that first glimpse of Handsome, Mike was more furious than she had been in her life. Here she'd lost sleep, been half wild with anxiety over him, and he steps out of the elevator looking as though he did not have a care in the world.

Then Handsome caught her eye, and waved his old salute. Mike melted. His progress was slow across the lobby. Downey stopped him. Some tourists asked for autographs. Handsome came in a kind of triumphal procession to her counter.

"How's the Skipper?" Maybe he'd forgotten he'd ever written it. She'd pretend she hadn't got it. But his eyes traveled to the spot where the note had been. As he opened the morning paper casually, he said:

"Did you get my note?" "Yes."

"Well?" People came up to the counter. Mike was busy for a little.

"Larry, you've lost your mind. 'Never felt better in my life.' He grinned at her. 'I bet you were surprised.'"

"Surprised is a mild word for it." "When can I talk to you? What about lunch?"

"You know, I don't take more than 15 minutes." "Then, it will have to wait until dinner."

"I've got to go home." "All right then, I'll come over and see Jimmie. I got that baseball from Ace today. I'll come on over after dinner."

Mike did not answer. "See you later, Skipper." He waved a goodbye. "I'm going to a movie after I wrap myself around a steak."

Mike stared after him, torn between resentment and laughter.

"Steak, indeed! And I haven't been able to eat for 24 hours worrying about him."

Never had the subway seemed so slow as it did that night. Mike fingered her gloves impatiently. "There was much to do. The house would be in shambles and she was firm in her determination to get most of the family away before Handsome came."

When she walked into the house, everybody had eaten, and were gathered in Jimmie's room. Her mother had left her some supper on the kitchen table. Mike went in to see Jimmie, bent down and kissed him.

"You're having company tonight?" "Handsomes?" Jimmie's face lighted.

"Great!" Her brother Jack jumped up. "I've got a picture I want him to autograph."

"I'm dying to see him!" Mary cried.

"Now look here, all of you. You two kids are going to the movies!" They raised their voices in violent protest.

"You are. Mother, you help me. They've got to. I won't have this place all messed up and you kids hanging all over Handsome when he comes."

"You're mean!" Jack retorted. "You're to see him. You can come in before he leaves. But he's coming just to see Jimmie. Help me get this room fixed up, Mary."

Mrs. Shannon joined in the argument with the children.

"Do I have to leave?" asked her father.

"Of course not, dad." Mike dropped a kiss on his head. "But please just this once, Mary."

Mike rushed into the sitting room, began picking up papers, magazines. It was a shabby room, with shabby furniture. Mike looked at her home with impartial eyes. Dad had done the best he could. Handsome might just as well know, first as last, they were poor.

Mary coming out of her sulks, joined Mike in the living room. She brought the carpet sweeper.

"You're a darling, Mary!" "You'll keep him here until we get home?"

"Of course. Here's money for the movies." Mary gave Mike a hug. "Now go and change your dress. Fix your hair. I'll take care of this mess," she added.

Mrs. Shannon was busy in Jimmie's room and Mr. Shannon wandered around in a lost soul. Finally he went into his bedroom, came back with his hat on.

"I'm going to get out of here while all this fuss is going on." "Dad, I didn't mean that."

"Oh, I'll be back. I want to see this Handsome fellow."

"Dad, put on your good coat."

"I'll do nothing of the kind. This is good enough for a ball player!"

A half hour later, when Mike came out in a white wash dress and appearingly, she looked at her

"Get your're pretty!" "That's because you love me."

"But doesn't Handsome love you, too?"

"I'll bet he does. I'll tell him he's got to."

"If you do, he'll never come back."

Jimmie laughed. "I'll bet he will."

Mike sat down in a chair beside Jimmie. "Darling, you won't do anything foolish that will make me unhappy?"

"Aw no! I'll be good."

Mary took Jack off to the movies before eight o'clock. Mrs. Shannon went to change into a fresh house dress. Mike found waiting difficult. She wished now she'd not told Handsome he could come. She went into her bedroom and looked again at that note he had left for her in the morning. But Jimmie called her, and she went on in to him.

It was desperately hard, sitting there, pretending to devote all her mind to Jimmie when her ear was strained to hear the doorbell. The hour dragged on.

After nine Mike had almost given up hope when the door bell rang. She rushed to push the buzzer, her hands trembling. Her mother, pretending not to notice Mike's nervousness, went in to Jimmie's room.

Mike opening the door, could hear Handsome tramping up the four flights of stairs. She leaned against the doorway, waiting.

"How are you, Skipper?" Handsome called when he caught sight of her from down the hall. He came in as usually as though he were accustomed to climb those stairs every day.

"You're the only guest we've ever had who could climb up here and not puff!" Mike managed a laugh.

"That's because I live right." He bent and kissed the tip of her nose, threw his hat on theavenport.

"Mother's in with Jimmie. He's so excited."

She led the way into the stuffy bedroom. Handsome came over o Jimmie's bedside.

"How's tricks?" he demanded, grinning down at the boy. "And here's that baseball."

Handsomes, of course, won Mrs. Shannon completely. Mike knew that would happen. Her mother was beaming, obviously adoring.

"But your name isn't on here!" Jimmie protested holding the precious baseball in his left hand, the hand which was not crippled.

"I'm not up to that yet. Next year maybe, when I'm going great. I'll autograph the other side for you. By that time, you'll be well enough to come and see me play."

"Do you really think so?" "Of course."

Jimmie started a long cross-examination, questions of every kind. Handsome settled himself beside the boy and his huge frame seemed to fill the little bedroom. Mrs. Shannon slipped out of the room after a while. And finally Mike left the two together.

"I like Mike. She's swell," Jimmie said when his sister had gone. "So do I. I think she's swell, too."

"I'm glad."

"Are you?" "Sure! Most of the guys she knows are sissy guys."

"Then I'm not a sissy?" "Gee, no. You can fight!" Jimmie grinned.

They got along famously. Mike came back and then Handsome told Jimmie he was leaving town with the team soon.

"We'll be on the road for two weeks this time. I'm going to miss Mike... and you Jimmie."

"It must be fun traveling in a parlor car."

"A fellow gets kinda tired of Handsome smiling at Mike as he thought of the banned poker game."

"Now, Jimmie, I've got to see my girl you know, and I've got to buy her some ice cream. As a Mike's face fell. Handsome said, 'We'll come back and bring some. What kind? Chocolate?'

"Chocolate!" agreed Jimmie. "Shortly. Handsome and Mike found themselves out on a Brooklyn street."

"I've got to talk to you. There's a candy store on the corner."

"It's pretty dreary."

"That doesn't matter. Not that I'm with you."

They went into the little neighborhood store. A nickel piano was playing.

"Two root beers," Handsome told the waiter, "and also a quart of chocolate ice cream to be taken out."

The clerk grinned and shuffled out. The piano was playing "Side walks of New York."

"Well, Skipper, here it is. Mike's package over to you. Mike 'Open it.'"

She tore the paper off this package. Out slipped a gorgeous diamond.

"Larry! Your ring!" For the first time she noticed the diamond ring, of which he was so proud, was gone from his hand.

"Now, put it on. Don't say a word. I want to explain things. I got it reset last night after the game."

"Put it on! Take this!" "Nonsense, put it on. Doesn't it look pretty?" Handsome admired the hand with the beautiful ring.

"I've got to begin at the beginning. I think tomorrow some of the sports writers will know I told Mike I was going to marry you."

"You... what?" "It's a long story. I should have had it in mind before, but I just never thought of it."

Mike laughed helplessly. (To Be Continued)

Broadway Season Is Here; Cohan And O'Keefe Say So

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—As soon as the World Series has released George M. Cohan from his annual duty of the ball parks and the glib Walter O'Keefe emerges with his first musical comedy song of the season, then Broadway is assured that the curtain is really raised upon another new theatrical year.

The new season has broken the wire now for Cohan is turning to Broadway from his summer's baseball cheering (usually from a box back of the N. Y. Giant's discount) and O'Keefe has bobbed up with another of his catchy, wacky song to be used in his new musical revue which will be revealed to first night audiences a little later this season.

His New Song

O'Keefe's new song is "Poor Old Grover." "What'll He Do When It's Over," which is a sorrowful speculation of what Grover Whalen can find to do when the World fair is over. Sings O'Keefe:

"But he's tired of futuramas And he wants his panamas And a change to get to bed like you or me."

After he wrote this song O'Keefe started on his current radio program and, coming away from the microphone one day, it occurred that after all perhaps he had better find out if Whalen would get angry.

"Whalen approved the song," O'Keefe said, "but he asked me to stay away from the fair because on eight different visits I made to see him it rained on every one of those eight days."

The way O'Keefe, today one of Broadway's No. 1 musical comedy writers, masters of ceremonies and singers, got started into show business is one of those many higgaw-puzzles in his career which are there but don't seem to add up so that 2 and 2 equals 4.

Interviewed Ed Wynn

"When I was going to Notre Dame I rented a room in Knute, Rockne's house and got a job reporting on a South Bend newspaper," O'Keefe said. "Ed Wynn came to play South Bend and I did an interview with him which he liked and he told me that if I ever came to Broadway to look him up."

"After Notre Dame I went south to see lots in the Florida boom and everybody could sell loam except me. To save myself from an enforced diet of sand and palm leaves

Turn about Frock

By PRUNELLA WOOD
TODAY'S DRESS is one of those likely to be remembered as a favorite when your small daughter grows up and thinks back to her school days. It's simple and sturdy but it's also fun to wear. Both basque bodice and skirt are reversible, plain on one side and checked on the other. Studs instead of buttons fasten the jacket, so that it may be turned in a jiffy. The skirt is the kind all little girls adore, full and frisky looking. The frock may be worn four different ways, as sketched, and comes in rayon taffeta for party wear as well as in percale for every day. Colors are Copenhagen and white, wine and white and black and wine. The price will confirm many a mother's opinion that it scarcely pays to spend hours over her own sewing machine.

"REDHEADS ARE LUCKY"

BY VERA BROWN

SYNOPSIS

Mike Shannon, pretty mahogany-haired magazine counter girl at the Hotel Eureka, is trying to reform one of its spectacular guests—the much publicized Handsome Larry Tegan, sensational young southpaw (left hand) pitcher whose misconduct has been worrying his team's management. Mike is the chief support of her family. She is not so pleased when "Wish" Malone, the club's No. 1 scout, suggests that she might marry the erratic Handsome. But when the big boy falls again for liquor, she rushes to his room to "bring him to." Assistant Coach Harper arrives, a most embarrassing scene ensued. Later that day at the stadium, when "kidded" about "the redhead," Handsome struck Assistant Coach Harper, but he escaped suspension with a warning. The next day, Mike was amazed to receive a note from Regan, reading: "You've got to marry me."

CHAPTER VIII

In the midst of her confusion Handsome burst out of the elevator, strode into the lobby. It was like a first act entrance. He exuded well being, complete content. Pressed, shaved, not a hair out of place. And he had on a new suit, Mike was sure.

In that first glimpse of Handsome, Mike was more furious than she had been in her life. Here she'd lost sleep, been half wild with anxiety over him, and he steps out of the elevator looking as though he did not have a care in the world.

Then Handsome caught her eye, and waved, his old salute. Mike melted. His progress was slow across the lobby. Downey stopped him. Some tourists asked for autographs. Handsome came in a kind of triumphal procession to her counter.

"How's the Skipper?" Maybe he'd forgotten he'd ever written it. She'd pretend she hadn't got it. But his eyes traveled to the spot where the note had been. As he opened the morning paper casually, he said:

"Did you get my note?"

"Yes."

"Well?"

People came up to the counter. Mike was busy for a little.

"Lorry, you've lost your mind."

"Never felt better in my life!"

He grinned at her. "I bet you were surprised."

"Surprised is a mild word for it."

"When can I talk to you? What about lunch?"

"You know, I don't take more than 15 minutes."

"Then, it will have to wait until dinner."

"I've got to go home."

"All right then, I'll come over and see Jimmie. I got that baseball team Ace today. I'll come on over after dinner."

Mike did not answer. "See you later, Skipper!" He waved a goodbye. "I'm going to a movie after I wrap myself around a steak."

Mike stared after him, torn between resentment and laughter.

"Steak, indeed! And I haven't been able to eat for 24 hours worrying about him."

Never had the subway seemed so slow as it did that night. Mike fingered her gloves impatiently. There was much to do. The house would be in shambles and she was firm in her determination to get most of the family away before Handsome came.

When she walked into the house, everybody had eaten, and were gathered in Jimmie's room. Her mother had left her some supper on the kitchen table. Mike went in to see Jimmie, bent down and kissed him.

"You're having company tonight?"

"Handsome?" Jimmie's face lighted.

"Yes."

"Great!" Her brother Jack jumped up. "I've got a picture I want him to autograph."

"I'm dying to see him!" Mary cried.

"Now look here, all of you. You two kids are going to the movies."

They raised their voices in violent protest.

"You are. Mother, you help me. They've got to. I won't have this place all messed up and you kids hanging all over Handsome when he comes."

"You're mean!" Jack retorted.

"You're to see him. You can come in before he leaves. But he's coming just to see Jimmie. Help me get this room fixed up, Mary."

Mrs. Shannon joined in the argument with the children.

"Do I have to leave?" asked her father.

"Of course not, dad." Mike dropped a kiss on his head. "But please just this once, Mary."

Mike rushed out into the sitting room, began picking up papers, magazines. It was a shabby room, with shabby furniture. Mike looked at her home with impartial eyes. Dad had done the best he could. Handsome might just as well know, first as last they were poor.

Mary coming out of her sulks, joined Mike in the living room. She brought the carpet sweeper.

"You're a darling, Mary!"

"You'll keep him here until we get home?"

"Of course. Here's money for the movies." Mary gave Mike a hug. "Now go and change your dress. Fix your hair. I'll take care of this mess," she added.

Mrs. Shannon was busy in Jimmie's room and Mr. Shannon wandered around like a lost soul. Finally he went into his bedroom, came back with his hat on.

"I'm going to get out of here while all this fuss is going on."

"Oh, I'll be back. I want to see this Handsome fellow."

"Dad, put on your good coat."

"I'll do nothing of the kind. This is good enough for a ball player!"

A half hour later, when Mike came out in a white wash dress and went in to Jimmie, he looked at her appraisingly.

"Gee, you're pretty!"

"That's because you love me."

"But doesn't Handsome love you, too?"

"Don't be silly, dear. Of course not."

"I'll bet he does. I'll tell him he's got to."

"If you do, he'll never come back."

Jimmie laughed. "I'll bet he will."

Mike sat down in a chair beside Jimmie. "Darling, you won't do anything foolish that will make me unhappy?"

"Aw no! I'll be good."

Mary took Jack off to the movies before eight o'clock. Mrs. Shannon went to change into a fresh house dress. Mike found waiting difficult. She wished now she'd not told Handsome he could come. She went into her bedroom and looked again at that note he had left for her in the morning. But Jimmie called her, and she went on in to him.

It was desperately hard, sitting there, pretending to devote all her time to Jimmie when her ear was strained to hear the doorbell. The hour dragged on.

After nine Mike had almost given up hope when the door bell rang. She rushed to push the buzzer, her hands trembling. Her mother, pretending not to notice Mike's nervousness, went in to Jimmie's room.

Mike opening the door, could hear Handsome tramping up the four flights of stairs. She leaned against the doorway, waiting.

"Ew are you, Skipper!" Handsome called when he caught sight of her from down the hall. He came in as usually as though he were accustomed to climb those stairs every day.

"You're the only guest we've ever had who could climb up here and not puff!" Mike managed a laugh.

"That's because I live right." He bent and kissed the tip of her nose, threw his hat on the davenport.

"Mother's in with Jimmie. He's so excited."

She led the way into the stuffy bedroom. Handsome came over to Jimmie's bedside.

"How's tricks?" he demanded, grinning down at the boy. "And here's that baseball."

Handsome, of course, won Mrs. Shannon completely. Mike knew that would happen. Her mother was beaming, obviously adoring.

"But your name isn't on here!" Jimmie protested holding the precious baseball in his left hand, the hand which was not crippled.

"I'm not up to that yet. Next year maybe, when I'm going great. I'll autograph the other side for you. By that time, you'll be well enough to come and see me play."

"Do you really think so?"

"Of course."

Jimmie started a long cross-examination, questions of every kind. Handsome settled himself beside the boy and his huge frame seemed to fill the little bedroom. Mrs. Shannon slipped out of the room after a while. And finally Mike left the two together.

"I like Mike. She's swell," Jimmie said when his sister had gone.

"So do I. I think she's swell, too."

"I'm glad."

"Are you?"

"Sure! Most of the guys she knows are sissy guys."

"Then I'm not a sissy?"

"Gee, no. You can fight!" Jimmie grinned.

They got along famously. Mike came back and then Handsome told Jimmie he was leaving town with the team soon.

"We'll be on the road for six weeks this time. I'm going to miss Mike.... and you Jimmie."

"It must be fun traveling in a parlor car."

"A fellow gets kinda tired of it. Handsome smiled at Mike as he thought of the banned poker games.

"Now, Jimmie, I've been told. Mike out for a little while. She's my girl you know, and I've got to buy her some ice cream." As Jimmie's face fell, Handsome added:

"We'll come back and bring you some. What kind? Chocolate?"

"Chocolate!" agreed Jimmie.

Shortly Handsome and Mike found themselves out on a Brooklyn street.

"It's pretty dreary."

"That doesn't matter. Not when I'm with you."

They went into the little neighborhood store. A nickel plane was playing.

The clerk grinned and shuffled off. The piano was playing "Side walks of New York."

"Well, Skipper, here it is!" He pushed a package over to Mike.

"Open it."

She tore the paper off the package. Out slipped a gorgeous diamond.

"Larry! Your ring!" For the first time she noticed the diamond ring, of which he was so proud, was gone from his hand.

"Now, put it on. Don't say a word. I want to explain things. I got it reset last night after the game."

"Put I can't take this."

"Nonsense, put it on. Doesn't it look pretty?" Handsome admired the hand with the beautiful ring.

"I've got to begin at the beginning. I think tomorrow some of the sports writers will know. I told Mr. Clisp I was going to marry you."

"You.... what?"

"It's a long story. I should have had it in mind before, but I just never thought of it."

Mike laughed helplessly.

Soviet Fostering Balkan Bloc

Future of the Balkans is believed to have been placed in the balance by negotiations centering in Moscow. Diplomatic versions were in conflict, but a six-nation Balkan bloc is believed to have been proposed to keep these countries out of war. The map shows how Russia's sphere of influence would prevail if the bloc was formed. The move, it is said, would halt Hitler's access to the oil fields of Trans-Caucasia, Persia and Iraq.

This Nazi medal for valor has replaced the Iron Cross of Imperial Germany, which Corporal Adolf Hitler won in the first world war. The medal is struck in bronze, silver and gold for varying degrees of bravery under fire.

Why France Feels Safe

This map, drawn from figures supplied by French authorities, reveals why France believes Germany must fight a defensive battle on the Western front. Odds are against Nazis' chances of breaking through territory already taken by French (shaded area) and the mighty Maginot Line beyond. To flank the defenses through Belgium or Holland would require at least 15 divisions, but Germany needs at least 91 of her estimated 115 divisions to man her Westwall defenses. The balance would leave too small a force to police Poland, watch her Russian ally and put down possible revolts in conquered Czechoslovakia, Austria or the Reich itself.

These areas have been "bombed" with millions of anti-Hitler propaganda circulars by British planes. Why France Feels Safe

This map, drawn from figures supplied by French authorities, reveals why France believes Germany must fight a defensive battle on the Western front. Odds are against Nazis' chances of breaking through territory already taken by French (shaded area) and the mighty Maginot Line beyond. To flank the defenses through Belgium or Holland would require at least 15 divisions, but Germany needs at least 91 of her estimated 115 divisions to man her Westwall defenses. The balance would leave too small a force to police Poland, watch her Russian ally and put down possible revolts in conquered Czechoslovakia, Austria or the Reich itself.

Fuehrer Adolf Hitler has set up a military administration over Polish territory occupied by German troops and has named Col. Gerd von Rundstedt, eastern commander-in-chief, as head.

Snow Hits New York State

First snow of the season falls in New York state at Malone, where temperatures dropped to five above zero. Old timers say the snowfall was the earliest in their recollection.

Report Revolt Against Nazis

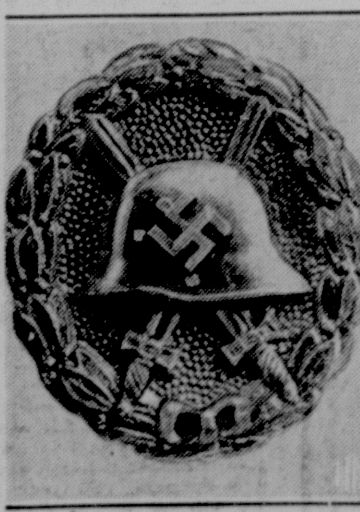

Revolt against their German conquerors by Czechs in Bohemia and Moravia, provinces of Czechoslovakia seized last spring by Hitler, were reported by London. The Nazis denied it. These areas have been "bombed" with millions of anti-Hitler propaganda circulars by British planes. European dispatches also indicate 15,000 Slovak troops refused to fight for their conquerors and had to be disarmed.

Soviet Fostering Balkan Bloc

Rate of the Balkans is believed to have been placed in the balance by negotiations centering in Moscow. Diplomatic versions were in conflict, but a six-nation Balkan bloc is believed to have been proposed to keep these countries out of war. The map shows how Russia's sphere of influence would prevail if the bloc was formed. The move, it is said, would halt Hitler's access to the oil fields of Trans-Caucasia, Persia and Iraq.

Nazi Medal

This Nazi medal for valor has replaced the Iron Cross of Imperial Germany, which Corporal Adolf Hitler won in the first world war. The medal is struck in bronze, silver and gold for varying degrees of bravery under fire.

SAFETY GIVES QUAKERS 2-0 WIN OVER RAVENNA

Stubborn Ravenna Squad Makes Gallant Goal-Line Stands To Halt Threats

Quakers Punch at Ravens' Payoff Stripe Five Times, But Lose Each Scoring Opportunity; Mis-Step By Kicker Costly to Ravenna

The tough luck that "dogged" Ravenna High school's plucky Ravens in their first two games of the 1939 football season is still trailing them.

The Ravens, who lost their first and second games of the current grid campaign by one-point, were robbed of a possible scoreless tie in their third game by an automatic safety which gave Salem High school's Quakers a 2 to 0 victory.

Playing at Reilly stadium before a crowd of more than 4,000 people, the Ravens gallantly staved off Salem threats for nearly three periods before Halback Dan Trochlo inadvertently stepped out of the end zone while punting from behind his goal line. The mis-step constituted a safety, giving the Quakers the two points which enabled them to register their second straight triumph.

Hollow Victory

It was a hollow victory for the Quakers, who five times punched at the Ravenna goal line, only to have their threats stopped within the shadow of the goal posts.

The Ravens' stubborn goal-line drives in the first half and one in the second half.

Appearing weak at the ends on offense and defense and displaying a complete lack of clever field generalship, the Quakers indicated that they will need plenty of pointers before they are ready to stand up against East Liverpool next Friday night.

The Quakers' pass defense also appeared woefully weak, permitting Ravenna to make four of its five first downs by the aerial route. They intercepted three of the Ravens' 14 passes, but allowed five to connect for long gains.

Power Thrusts Work
The Quakers' power thrusts into the center of the line with Marvin Wukotich carrying the ball, played for consistent gains, but their attempts to drive off tackle and sweep the ends failed frequently. Ravenna ends and tackles, left wide open by Salem blockers, time after time spoiled the Quakers' sweeps and off-tackle smashes.

The Ravens' defensive play, featuring the brilliant performances of Ends Russell Pott and Dick Henderson and Guard Bill Rock, overshadowed the offensive showing of the Quakers.

The Salem attack advanced steadily in mid-field during the first half but each time the Quakers moved to within scoring distance their offense bogged down. They made seven first downs on power plays in the first two quarters, playing practically all of the first half in Ravenna's territory.

Their first drive toward the goal line, started in the first quarter, was halted at the start of the second quarter when Ravenna took the ball on downs on its own one yard line.

Halt Second Threat
Mid-way in the second period, the Quakers again drove deep in Ravenna territory, but once again the Ravens halted the threat, taking the ball on downs on five-yard line.

CARMEL, Cal.—This city has abolished the system of tagging automobiles for parking infractions. The reason was that under the existing ordinance a driver could not be prosecuted for tearing up his tag unless a policeman saw him. Those who did not tear up their tags secretly just left them intact and ignored them.

The Ravens' stubborn goal-line stands stopped four touchdown drives in the first half and one in the second half.

Appearing weak at the ends on offense and defense and displaying a complete lack of clever field generalship, the Quakers indicated that they will need plenty of pol-

Lack of a scoring punch was revealed a third time in the second quarter when the Quakers advanced to the Ravenna 11-yard stripe before losing possession of the ball.

The Quakers failed to threaten in the third quarter, and, although they managed to keep the play in Ravenna territory, they failed to make a first down.

A well-placed punt by Don West drove the Ravens' back to their one-foot line late in the third period and set the stage for the safety which came a few seconds later when Trochic attempted to kick the ball out of danger.

Ravenna Takes Command
After permitting Salem to dominate the play for three periods, Ravenna took over the driver's seat in the fourth quarter, opening up with a passing attack which enabled them to drive into the Quakers' territory for the first time of the game.

Passes from Paul Pugh to Folt moved the Ravens as far as the Salem 31-yard line before the drive was halted.

Salem drove deep into Ravenna territory once in the fourth period, advancing to the Ravens' 16-yard line before Ravenna held for downs.

Power thrusts by Marvin Wukotich into the center of the Ravenna line picked up the most yardage for the Quakers throughout the game. Wukotich, who was stopped on most of his attempts to drive off-tackle, carried the ball 27 times, gaining 103 of the total 167 yards Salem picked up from scrimmage.

Quarterback Johnny Volo assigned himself to ball-carrying duties 19 times, but made only 48 yards and lost 11.

West Looks Good
The performance of Don West in the backfield was one of the bright spots of an otherwise dismal picture.

Although gaining only 16 yards on eight ball-carrying assignments, West did more than his share by intercepting two Ravenna passes and contributing better-than-average punting.

West got away several splendid punts, including one which traveled 60 yards and drove Ravenna back to its own 30-yard line early in the game. Two other kicks by the Salem punter showed the Ravens' deep into their own territory later in the game.

Passing failed to play any part in the Quakers' attack. Salem attempted four passes and completed only one.

The Ravens played the entire game without the services of two regulars, Halback Leon Havre and Guard John Gembler, who are laid up with injuries.

LOS ANGELES — Pedestrians grinned in amazement as 102-pound Gladys Grossman of New York resoundingly slapped Policeman C. W. Mitchell's face after he cited her for jaywalking.

"As I took her arm to lead her to the call box, she smacked me—plenty! She said later she was sorry and accepted the ticket."

Bang-Bang

DENVER—A bathrobe-clad gunman with a pistol on a cord around his neck and a woman's stocking pulled over his head climbed into Gilbert J. Carroll's car at an intersection and told him to drive on.

As they rode, he fired out the window several times.

"Listen to that if you think I'm bluffing," he said.

Finally he took 50 cents from Carroll but passed up the car when he found one tire was weak and there was no spare.
